Damage assessment continues after flooding

Caution urged in dealing with unknown contractors

BY BOB DEMAREE

Efforts to assess flood damage and assist those impacted by last Saturday's flash flooding are continuing in what Madison Mayor Bob Courtney called a multi-jurisdictional effort involving the City of Madison, Jefferson County Commissioners, Jefferson County Emergency Management Agency and Indiana Department of Homeland Security on Friday.

"There's no more important place than our homes," said Courtney. "We understand how traumatic this is for everybody. We will do the best we can to assist you. We will work hard to be sure to bring resources to community and in the meantime, please reach out."

A meeting has been called for 5:30 p.m. on Monday at Walnut Street Fire Company No. 4, 424 Walnut Street, for those impacted by the flashing flooding to get

City may acquire more property at gateway

BPWS approve moving on purchase of 150 Harrison St.

BY BOB DEMAREE

The transformation of the gateway to Madison coming off the Milton-Madison Bridge took another step forward Wednesday when Madison's Board of Public Works and Safety gave Mayor Bob Courtney authority to negotiate the purchase of the 150 Harrison Street property that was the site of Bullock's River City Marathon for many years.

The 0.3-acre property, located on the east side of Harrison Street and owned by John and Libby Kinman, of Vevay, has been offered to the city at a cost of $100,000. The board's approval allows Courtney to pursue the purchase.

ISP releases victim's name in fatal shooting

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Indiana State Police have released the name of the man who died in Tuesday's shooting on North John Deer Road near Dupont while the death investigation is ongoing.

Dustin "Kutter" Lindner

Shortly after 4 a.m. on Tuesday, the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department received a 911 call reporting that shots were fired at a structure in the 8000 block of North John Deere Road. Deputies responding to the address located an adult male who had sustained a gunshot wound lying in the yard. The man was pronounced dead at the scene by the Jefferson County Coroner's Office.

Police identified the victim on Tuesday but withheld his name pending notification of family. On Wednesday the ISP-Versailles Post confirmed that the victim of the shooting had been positively identified as Dustin B. "Kutter" Lindner, 35, Georgetown, Kentucky.

According to social media, Lindner has also listed Brookville, Indiana, as a residence in the past. He is married with three children and a gofundme.com page has been established to help pay for his funeral expenses.

DOING A DOUBLE TAKE

Twin sisters Konnie McCollum (left) and Karla McCollum (right) are avid runners who list the 2020 Boston Marathon among their many accomplishments. Both are longtime participants in the Madison Firecracker 10K and this year they will also serve as honorary starters for the July 3 road race.

McCollum twins named Firecracker 10K starters

BY BOB DEMAREE

EDITOR'S NOTE: For more Firecracker 10K Race coverage, see Page 12 of the 55th Annual Madison Regatta Souvenir Section inserted in today's Madison Courier.

Identical twins Konnie and Karla McCollum began running at age 13 while attending school in Louisville and over the 43 years since they have competed in hundreds of races and logged thousands of miles leading up to a career highlight in 2020 when they both qualified for and competed in the Boston Marathon.

The 56-year-old sisters, married — two brothers — and living in Madison, have been competing in marathons for a few years, but they always seem to find time in their busy schedule to run their hometown race and this year they will get to do even more as honorary starters of the 42nd running of the Madison Firecracker 10K.

"I was floored," said Konnie, expressing her reaction to being named honorary starters. "We were very surprised and humbled."

Perseverance and consistency are what Konnie and Karla allowed them to achieve their dream of making the Boston Marathon in spite of their life challenges.

They both have full-time jobs, busy home lives and both have faced health challenges. Karla is an ovarian cancer survivor and Konnie had a heart attack during a race. But both have persevered.

"Life happens, but don't give up on your goals and dreams," said Karla. "Make a plan and stick to it."

They began competing in marathons six years ago because "we thought we should do something crazy for our 50th birthday," Konnie said, after competing for several years in mostly 5K races and other shorter races.

So they began training to run the 26.2-mile marathon distance. It was in their second marathon that Konnie had a heart attack during the race, but only realized it when she collapsed after finish line.

"I couldn't see or hear anything," said Konnie, who learned that she has a heart condition — a blocked artery — that with medicine and doctor's care she now knows how to manage.

Now instead of running on their own, they both always finish together. "We take turns on who crosses the finish line first," Karla said.

In Loving Memory of

Eileen Kittle

Eileen was born in London England as the second child of nine to Gladys and Stan Brisco. Her childhood was marked by WWII; after the bombing of her family home, she and her two sisters were moved to family in Wales until the end of the war. In 1952 she met United States Navy man Roger Kittle in London. They were married within a year, moved to southern Indiana, first to Lawrenceburg, then Madison; she became a naturalized citizen the year of the United States bicentennial celebration in 1976.

Eileen received great satisfaction in volunteer work, lifelong service starting in 1974 after the Madison Tornado with the American Red Cross. She also supported the Elks Club through the Ladies' auxiliary and in partnership with Roger on fundraisers, events and gatherings. As a board member of the Madison Regatta, Eileen developed, and then ran, the "VIP tent" on the riverfront, welcoming guests from all over and raising funds for the Regatta. Never one to sit still, she took that instinct for "helping out" with her to Hickory Creek as a resident wanting to help other residents, organizing menus and serving as president of the Resident's Council. The one thing all these endeavors had in common was the satisfaction she received connecting with people she knew and didn't know.

Eileen is survived by her three children: Stan Kittle (Phil) of Cincinnati, Ohio; Linda Kittle (Dane) of Santa Cruz, California, and their children, Kelsey (Tylor) and Gabriel; Gloria Goetz (Jim) of Erlanger, Kentucky and their children, Adam, Sara, Jake and Travis (Casey) and two great grandchildren. She is also survived by British family; her sister: Lynne Regan; and her brothers: Reggie, David and Stan; and many, many nieces and nephews.

Eileen led a long full, life with Roger filled with family, friends and world travel until his passing in 2014.

A memorial gathering will be held on Sunday, June 27, 2021 from 1:00 PM until 3:30 PM at the Madison Elk's Lodge #524, 1251 West Main Street, Downtown Madison.

Memorial contributions can be made to Hickory Creek at Madison in support of the gifted and kind care they provide residents. Contributions can be made at Lytle Welty Funeral Homes & Cremation Service, or online at www.lytlewelty.com. Lytle Welty Funeral Homes & Cremation Service, Vail Chapel is in charge of arrangements.

information. Courtney said it is an opportunity for those impacted to share information to assist in the damage assessment and to provide details to those impacted about financial assistance that is available. Additionally, Courtney said the city's building inspector will be there to talk about the permit and inspections process as it relates to reconstruction after the flooding.

Emergency Management Agency Director Troy Morgan said an assessment has been done on impacted properties from the exterior based "mud lines or water lines on structures or trees, or other typographic landmarks" as well "how that affects the electrical service or whatever else the case may be."

Morgan encouraged every renter, property owner or business impacted by the flash flooding report their damage by completing forms on the City of Madison and Jefferson County websites, whether or not they think the Emergency Management Agency has made an assessment. "We want to be sure we know everyone who has sustained damage" from the flash flooding in Jefferson County, said Morgan.

Once the assessment has been validated, Morgan said that information will be submitted to the Indiana Department of Homeland Security to determine if the county meets the threshold for state and federal assistance. "If that's the case, then the process will move forward," Morgan said.

Courtney said more than 80 tons of debris has been removed by the City of Madison's Street Department from the flash flooding in downtown Madison. He encouraged affected residents to continue placing damaged materials and contents from their homes on the sidewalks for the city's street department to pick up for disposal. "We will do sweeps during to the day and keep the sidewalks cleaned as well," he said.

Both Morgan and Courtney warned against people who might look to take advantage of residents. "There are people who will try to take advantage of a bad situation or someone's misfortune, so I caution everyone," said Morgan. He also recommended being careful about any unknown contractor who may seem questionable, "especially if they ask for a deposit or money up front."

Courtney said no city employees have been conducting assessments of properties, and if a person doing that "has portrayed themselves as a city employee, that is inaccurate." He said the city has a contractor registration process to weed out questionable contractors and that residents should make sure contractors are approved by the City of Madison before engaging in work.

Courtney said the Crooked Creek Bridge on Milton Street that was damaged in the flash flooding will be closed for approximately two more weeks. "There has been an initial assessment done on that bridge but there will need to be repair before we can reopen the bridge," he said.

He added that the city will continue to assess damage to other city property but currently is first prioritizing renters, property owners and businesses in the affected areas.

"We still have a lot of work to do," said Courtney. "Not only in the recovery effort, but in future mitigation efforts. We appreciate everyone's patience."

GATEWAY

"This is a once in the lifetime opportunity that will help beautify the entry into Madison off the bridge," said board member Karl Eaglin.

The city earlier this year purchased property on the west side of Harrison Street so buying the land on the west side would give Madison control of its entrance coming off the Ohio River Bridge.

Courtney said the purchase is an investment into the gateway approach to Madison. "We're grateful to the Kinmans for offering this to us," he said.

In other business, the Board of Public Works:

• Approved a contract for $26,213 with the Lakota Group of Chicago for a Historic District survey, which Nicole Schell, director of planning, indicated will take seven months to complete. In addition to the surveying, the project includes taking several photos of each property and then putting it all in a database that will be available online as well as city hall.

Courtney said the survey involves 1,600 properties in the Historic District, something that Schell said hasn't been done comprehensively since the Historic District was established in 1980s. She said a partial survey was done in 2006 in setting the National Landmark designated area, which he said will also be done with this survey.

Schell said the survey is needed because there are currently only paper copies of the survey, and all other photos are stored at Historic Madison Inc., on film strips. Schell said the new survey will provide greater access to information by the public.

Courtney said information on the condition and character of properties, and contributing elements is what is needed when looking at the historical district, not just by the city for planning purposes but also by property owners.

Schell recommended that the surveys be done every five to 10 years, but said once Lakota Group completes the survey "that we will be able to get in and make changes as we go."

• Vote unanimously to not recommend a request by Chris Lanthier to partially vacate an alley between Vaughn Drive and the 700 block of West First Street. Lanthier said land at 701 West First Street was purchased in May from Madison Coal and Supply, and that by vacating that portion of the alley, it would allow Lanthier Winery to better explore its options for expanding the business, although he's uncertain when or what that might involve. The portion of the alley that Lanthier wants vacated is adjacent to the winery at 123 Mill Street.

Although BPWS decided not to recommend vacating the alley, Lanthier's request can still move on to the City Council for a public hearing and consideration, said City Attorney Joe Jenner, noting the request only goes before BPWS to provide a recommendation.

Eaglin expressed concern about vacating that portion of the alley without knowing what might be done with it. "There's nothing in the future to keep you from selling that property," said Eaglin.

He also was concerned on how vacation might impact the Lumber Mill Antique Mall, 721 West First Street. "To vacate an alley that has a business at the other end, that bothers me a little bit because that restricts them in the future, and east/west access to the back of their building," Eaglin said, noting it could force delivery vehicles to have to pull in and then back out behind that building. "That's a narrow alley anyway, I just worry about anything in the future."

Dean Miller, owner of the Lumber Mill Antique Mall, said he is opposed to a portion of the alley being vacated. "It's taking a thoroughfare and converting it into a blind alley."

Charlie Ricketts, 707 West First Street, voiced concern about cutting off part of the alley that runs behind his home. "It's not a high traffic alley, but it is a service alley," he said.

Kimm Hollis, 203 Mill Street, voiced support for Lanthier's request, noting Lanthier Winery has "been wonderful for the community," and "it's a wonderful opportunity for the business to expand and everybody should take advantage of that."

• Approved an amendment to street closings for the Madison Regatta Waterball Fight moving the event to Main Street east of Elm Street and west of Poplar Street. The event, which has previously been held in front of the Jefferson County Courthouse was moved to avoid having to apply to the State of Indiana for permits.

Eaglin voiced concern whether the clock on the south side of Main Street at Broadway Street would be safe at the new location.

"There's an expensive clock there," said Eaglin, noting how competitive the waterball fights can be.

Courtney suggested shifting the event away from the clock, and Hannah Fagen, director of community relations, agreed that can be done. Eaglin followed up by noting moving the event to Broadway and Main streets "is a better location because of the trucks" that travel past the Courthouse to Jefferson Street on U.S. 421.

• Approved an $7,250 contract with Starbound Entertainment for balloons during the Madison Regatta parade, which Fagen said they were able to gain savings by making arrangements for balloons in conjunction with the Christmas parade. Fagen said the cost is paid through sponsorships.

• Schell introduced new city hires: Joe Patterson, as the city's associate planner; and Scott Gross, as city building inspector.

"Two new faces and we're excited to have them," said Schell. Courtney welcomed both noting "You're joining a very important team and staff in the building and planning."

• Approved street closings for Thornton's Bike Show on Sunday, Aug. 29. Tammy Schwagmeier, general manager of Thornton's Motorcycle Sales, said the event, which in the past has only featured vintage bikes, will include all bikes this year. She said the program is free to public with proceeds from entry fees benefiting House of Hope. The closings from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Aug. 29 will include Vaughn Drive from east of Central Avenue to the west side of Elm Street, along with short portions of Elm Street, Broadway Street, Poplar Street and Central Avenue to Vaughn Drive, along with the city parking lot between Poplar Street and Central Avenue.

• Approved street closings for a Farm to Table event on Sunday, Sept. 5, on the northbound and southbound lanes of Broadway Street between Main Street and Third Street from noon to 10 p.m.

• Approved the midpoint PACE project at 622 West Street by Vince Kidd for $12,500. "I am happy to see progress here," Courtney said. "That property stood in a dilapidated state for over a dozen years. It's great to see it finally come back to life. I know Vince still has a lot to do but I'm grateful to everyone taking on projects so complicated like this, but also so visible."

• Approved the final payment for the PACE project at 831 West Main Street by Josh Nichter of Liberty Screen Printing for $7,880. Schell noted the building was damaged by a fire at the building next door. "He had to completely gut the entire building and re-do it," she said. Courtney said, the project "looks great. That, plus the property next door, it's great this has been done so quickly."

The initial investigation indicates that an altercation at the residence led to shots being fired with the male shot at least once before he died as result of injuries he sustained. No arrests have been made at this time. However, detectives believe the incident was not a random attack and do not believe there is any threat to the general public at this time.

Anyone with information about the incident is asked to call the Indiana State Police-Versailles Post at 812-689-5000.

How does Warren Buffett do it? What is his secret?
"Here is a secret, insurance companies do NOT want your money; they simply want to HOLD your money." Stephen Dybwad

Layin' It on the Line
By Stephen Dybwad
Retirement Planning/
Wealth Management
Warren Buffett and other smart investors make money by borrowing to invest in low-risk, low-return securities, sort of like a "specialized margin" account. Other folks, who don't have enough borrowing power to play the leverage game (interest rates on margin accounts can be high for the small investor), can only generate profits by investing in possibly higher-risk assets.
The irony about risk-taking is that most of us are in the second group, small investors. But it can also include professional investors such as many mutual fund managers. If they don't take some risk, they may lose the opportunity to make money. Sometimes the reason the market will move with stock because the demand for a better return triggers the increase in its valuation. This, of course, drives up the prices of those assets, thus reducing their returns.
That all sounds well and good, but what is the answer? How can you leverage your funds and take advantage just like the big players?
One way is to look at your money from a different point of view, not as money but as "what is the purpose of your money and what do you want it to accomplish?" For example, have you ever considered why investors like Buffett try and make so much money? Does it mean they can eat better, sleep better, take more vacations?
Their goals are different than the goals of most of us. We want to use our money for life's demands, education, food, housing, and retirement. Instead, their money is for two things keeping score and their legacy.
So how do we "game" the system? Like I said, looking at the reason for using money from a different view. Why not look at your retirement money not from how much you can accumulate but by how much income it can provide?
Think of your money for its intended use, and for most of us that would be retirement income and money to enjoy security later in life. There is a way to compete and use the system, it is easy, simple, and the big boys won't know about it. Why won't they? Because they don't care, they only care about their reasons for their money.
How would you like to "earn" 4-6% on your retirement account? You can, it is available, and it is guaranteed. How can that be? Simple, if you use your funds as an income instead of a pile of money, many insurance companies will pay that rate on the funds which will be targeted and used as retirement funds. It is called an Income Rider, and it is available as an add-on with annuities. The amount earned in your account stays on the income accumulation side; the amount you actually can receive as retirement is based on other factors such as age. Many contracts are different so do your research carefully.
How can they do that? Insurance companies know how many people will use these funds for this use. So they plan for it, and they reinsure their liability if things change, and they pay out more than planned. They ensure their obligation to you just like you can secure your retirement income for you and your spouse.
How do they reinsure the retirement obligations promised to you; yes, you guessed it, the Warren Buffett's of the world ensure the companies promises.
My secret? "It is not how much money you have; it is about how much money you have each month."
Let an insurance company hold part of your retirement money and receive a higher rate of interest when you need or want it for income.

Smartphone addiction

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My wife and I have been married for 35 years. We've owned iPhones since they came out. She's become quite proficient with using hers to keep up with the news, shop online, etc. The issue I have lately is that she uses the phone throughout the night. She probably wakes up on average five times during the night, and each time, she uses the phone anywhere from five minutes to an hour. I don't suspect "foul play"; she's never secretive or trying to hide her screen from me or anything like that. She's mostly just shopping, reading news and cruising the web. But I've shown her tons of studies, cited articles and discussed time and time again how unhealthy it is, based on modern science and medicine. It also disturbs my sleep. She says that it calms her down — when every study says that it does the opposite. I would love to break through to her so she could find a healthier alternative and also so we might restore some of our intimacy, as that has been lacking. — Lonely in Bed

Dear Lonely: You're right on every count. There's a whole trove of research showing that using a smartphone (or computer) at bedtime decreases both the quantity and quality of sleep and takes a toll on couples' sex lives. But your wife's compulsive smartphone use seems beyond the point of reason. Breaking through to her here is more about reaching her heart than her head. Let her know how concerned you are about her phone habit, that it's not just a nuisance but a genuine concern. Ask her to leave her devices outside the bedroom for your health, her health and the health of your relationship. If she refuses, ask her to see a counselor who specializes in behavioral addictions.

Dear Annie: My 67-year-old boyfriend of 12 years threw me out for a 22-year-old, but soon afterward, he called and said he thought we could still work it out. We ran into each other in public a month ago, and he couldn't keep his hands off me. He said he'd call me that night, but he never did. And when I tried him, he didn't pick up. He later sent me a text saying: "Not gonna happen. Too late." I have a feeling that he won't speak to me or see me because he knows that he'll want me back.

Right now, all my belongings are still at his place. I told him that once they leave, they won't come back. He has said nothing to me about getting my stuff, but I'm going to just show up. I still love him deeply and want to try to make this work. What have I got to lose? — Pining for Him

Dear Pining: A better question is, what do you have to gain by continuing to give your heart to someone who keeps tossing it aside? It's time you drop him like a bad habit. The longer you go without seeing him, the easier it will get and the healthier you will become. If you don't think you'll be able to resist his charms when retrieving your stuff, ask a friend or family member to go. Stay strong.

Seeking self-worth

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: Lately, I have been feeling like I am not good enough. I have anxiety and depression, which I have had since I was young, to the point where I attempted suicide four times. I used to have anorexia and bulimia and constantly cut myself on my arms and legs — because this was the one thing in my life I had control over. I am not proud of myself for those days.

I have children now, and my son, at 14 years old, questions himself like I did. Like I do. I keep comparing myself to other women, and not just other women, but my best friends, from their face to their body. Even though I have been told I am beautiful, I never believe it.

I don't want my son to go down the same road as I have. I keep thinking: What if I never learn to love myself and be confident? Will I teach him to be in the world without a voice? Questioning everything he does? Will he believe he is not handsome and ruin his relationships, like I have, with his insecurities? I am scared, honestly, because I see so much of myself in him, and even though I try to get myself to at least say positive things about me, I just never can.

When I am depressed, I cry on and off all day and can't concentrate on anything. I'm constantly telling myself I'm not worth it: that I'm not skinny enough in certain places, that I'm not beautiful because I don't have long flowing hair and because I'm not someone else. I don't want to leave this earth not loving myself. I don't want to leave this earth not teaching my babies that they are beautiful and that they deserve to be heard.

I know that the things I do affect them. In my mind, I am so sure I can change it, but in my heart, I'm this little girl who felt unprotected and grew up being bullied and wearing glasses. The only thing I had going for me was that I was the smartest child in my class. I feel like her. And I feel like the bullies who told her they don't love her, they don't like her and she's not enough. She's ugly. I guess what I need to know is: How do you build confidence? How do you stop your child from repeating your life? — Hurting

Dear Hurting: You should seek the help of a professional therapist as soon as possible. You are dealing with depression, low self-worth and what sounds like a continued eating disorder. None of these diseases are your fault, but you must get help as soon as you can. You are incredibly aware of yourself, which is always half the battle to healing. Clearly, you suffered trauma when you were younger from being bullied, and you are projecting that type of experience onto your son. This is a typical thing for parents to do to their children, and it is not fair to them. But the good news is that you are so aware of it and you want to stop.

You are very wise and a good mother for wanting to get emotionally healthy for your children, because so much of good parenting comes from modeling good behaviors. That is not to make you feel guilty or overwhelmed. In fact, you could say to your son that his mom sometimes feels insecure, but she wants to change and is seeking the help of a professional in order to do that.

MCS has new handbook, culinary arts equipment

BY BOB DEMAREE

Madison Consolidated School board members approved revisions to student handbooks and equipement purchases for the culinary arts lab at special Madison Consolidated Schools Board meeting Thursday morning.

The revised Code of Conduct and Madison Consolidated High School handbooks had been tabled at the board's regular June meeting. Committees had met to review and update the handbooks, but discrepancies were found between printed versions and what was onlline.

"It's been a long process to get to today," said Madison Superintendent Dr. Jeffrey Studebaker, who expressed appreciation to everyone involved in the process.

"I apologize for the mix up," he said, telling the board members they had "the wrong form in front of you at the (June 9) board meeting," and he noted that was an error by the administration.

Board President Jodi Yancey, had expressed concerns about the handbook at the June meeting, but said she is now pleased with the handbooks, and glad for the opportunity to meet with members of the handbook committees.

"It was good to sit at the table and to work it out," she said.

In other business:

• Approved the purchase of equipment for the culinary arts lab, which Studebaker noted is time sensiive with requirements of federal grant fund stipulating that purchases be made prior to June 30. Equipment will be purchased from WebstaurantStore at a cost of $35,960.24, Zesco at $7,135.80 and Nasco at $3,595.54.

Studebaker said the culinary arts lab now occupies space that had previously been used by Cub Manufacturing for a computer lab, which has been moved into space where Cub Manufacturing is now located. He noted this has now provided additional space for culinary arts for more lab space that is more flexible and will provide for an industrial kitchen.

• Approved personnel for the CARES team including the hiring of Tina Hamilton as a CARES team counselor at Madison Junior High School (MJHS). Dosha Harrell will be moving as a CARES team social worker at MJHS to E.O. Muncie Junior/Senior High School, and Deputy and Anderson elementaries. Rachel Otto will be transferring as CARES team social worker from MJHS to MCHS. Additionally, Cassidy Hearn resigned as a fifth grade teacher at MJHS, effective June 15.

Overdue test drive leads to drug, theft charges

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Madison Police arrested a local man on drug charges Wednesday after stopping the car he was driving while investigating a report of a vehicle that was reported missing by a local car dealership.

Madison Police were investigated the alleged theft of a vehicle from Chandler Chevrolet on Clifty Drive after the dealership reported that a customer had taken a 2019 Chevrolet Malibu for a test drive about three hours earlier and had failed to return.

Dillien Lee Keller

Officers obtained vehicle and driver information and began watching for the car. At approximately 5:45 p.m., Patrolman Cameron Blankenship located the Malibu northbound on Michigan Road near Madison Mobile Village.

Blankenship conducted a successful traffic stop and found the vehicle was being operated by Dillien Lee Keller, 25, Madison. Keller is also the person who initially picked up the vehicle for the test drive. During a subsequent search of the vehicle, officers located a crystal substance in the vehicle that tested positive as methamphetamine.

Keller was taken into custody and charged with Criminal Conversion-Unauthorized Control of a Motor Vehicle, a Level 5 felony, and Possession of Methamphetamine, a Level 6 felony. He was lodged at the Jefferson County Jail and is being held on a $1,500 cash bond.

MPD Patrolman Jared Sweet led the investigation with the assistance of Blankenship.

In 2020, they finally made the field for the Boston Marathon after previously achieving a qualifying time yet not making the field. However, COVID-19 canceled the race, and the Boston Marathon became a virtual event with them submitting their times from the Fair on the Square Marathon in Danville, Indiana, in September.

Konnie and Karla hope to try again for the Boston Marathon in 2023, noting the 2022 event will have a smaller field, making it even more difficult to make the race even if they have a qualifying time.

But for now the McCollum's focus is on the Firecracker 10K, an event launched by former Madison Courier Publisher Don Wallis in 1979 and sponsored by the newspaper the next 41 years through 2019. The 2020 race was canceled by COVID and the paper's new ownership were hesitant about staging a race in 2021 since the pandemic was still ongoing.

However, the Madison Area Running Club stepped in and agreed to take over management of the race and continue the tradition of having an honorary starter.

For the July 3 Firecracker 10K that will be Konnie and Karla but only Karla will be competing in the 6.2-mile race. Konnie contracted COVID-19 in November and is working to regain her endurance. For Karla, it will be her first race back after recovering from a plantar fascia tear.

"I'm worried about running the downhill" on Hanging Rock Hill, Karla said, noting the downward motion could be difficult coming off the injury.

She's also hoping for mild temperatures and even a little rain might not be all bad.

"Running in the rain is easier than heat and humidity," she said.

They both are committed to continuing to excel with their running. Most often, they start their day at 4:30 a.m. with runs before their days get to busy because that's the only time they can ensure that they will get it done.

"At that time in the morning, we don't need our minds to work; just our legs," Konnie said.

"Perseverance and consistency is the key to success in anything we do. Adapt, overcome, and be flexible," Konnie said.

MADISON COURIER BASEBALL PLAYER OF THE YEAR

Leadership sets Forner above the rest

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Late in the 2021 sectional championship game against Silver Creek, Zach Forner lifted a shot to deep centerfield that went for a routine out. But rather than pout that he had let his team down, the Madison Consolidated High School senior immediately went to the on-deck hitter to relay info on what pitch had just fooled him.

"He's our leader, he's our captain and more than anybody else, he is responsible for the success we had this year," Madison baseball coach Tim Armstrong said. "He's the one who made the team go."

It is that quality, more than the batting average, stolen bases or RBIs, that set Forner apart from the crowd to make him this year's Madison Courier Baseball Player of the Year.

Outgoing and quick with a smile, Forner is an easy person to like and it makes him the perfect leader, a role he embraced on a team that started as many as six sophomores this year. As early as last summer, he prepared to take on the mantle of captain.

"Last year in travel ball, my coach, Zach McClellan, told me that being a leader was a role that I needed to play," Forner said. "I knew we were going to be young and I knew that we needed somebody to be the leader. I wasn't always this kind of person, but I knew that it was something that I had to do."

Forner seized that leadership role right from the start as Madison ripped off an eight-game win streak to open the season. The Cubs finished the season 20-12 — their first 20-win season in 17 years — and reached the sectional championship game.

Forner played a huge role in that success on the field. He batted .404 with nine doubles, two home runs and 28 RBIs while stealing 13 bases. He was also 4-1 on the mound with a 3.97 ERA and three saves, picking up a crucial win in the first game of the sectional.

Nina Campbell

Madison senior Zach Forner is the Madison Courier Baseball Player of the Year.

The consummate team player, Forner played any role or position the team needed him to play, whether it was outfield, first base or on the mound. And he did it without a complaint.

"Zach is not a pitcher and he would be the first one to tell you that, but he got out there and competed and was huge for us in the sectional," Armstrong said. "He got the win in game one and he came into the championship game against a really good Silver Creek team and kept us in the game. He's a gamer."

"He's our leader, he's our captain and more than anybody else, he is responsible for the success we had this year."

— Tim Armstrong
Madison baseball coach, about Zach Forner

"I'm not really a pitcher but I love being out there because I love to compete," Forner said with a smile. "I just love that one-on-one competition."

Like everybody, Forner lost last season due to COVID-19, and he spent last summer and this spring trying to regain his form. While he didn't reach all of his personal goals, he was pleased with his season.

"Last year, I was swinging the bat as well as I ever have and I really think I was going to have a monster season," Forner said. "I remember the day well when we were told the spring season was canceled. But when we got a chance to play in the summer, I just went to work, trying to become the best player that I could."

Because of the lost season, Forner had a hard time catching the eye of colleges coaches. Finally, he was able to get Indiana Wesleyan in Marion to give him a look and, after a tryout at the school, he was offered a scholarship and officially signed on Thursday.

"I really wanted to play somewhere down south and when that didn't pan out I started looking around," Forner said. "My dad suggested Indiana Wesleyan because we had played a few travel tournaments there and really, it was a great fit. I had the tryout and hit a few balls and the coach offered me and I took it right on the spot. It was a great fit."

"Zach is a baseball player and he is a terrific hitter," Armstrong said. "He'll have so problem at all fitting in up there."

Forner plans on majoring in business with a possible eye toward sales, the perfect occupation for somebody as out-going as he is. Regardless of what he chooses to do, it's a good bet that he will be a success.

"I really wouldn't be where I was today without my parents and coach Armstrong and all of the coaches," Forner said. "I've been around coach Armstrong my whole life at Shawe and here. They've all helped me so much along the way."

Todd named girls basketball coach at Switzerland County

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

David Todd said he first realized that his daughter Brooke would one day become a basketball coach when he saw pictures of her in the newspaper. Nearly every photo was of her taking charge on the court.

"Most of the game shots were shots of her communicating on the court with her teammates," the former Switzerland County head boys basketball coach said of his daughter. "I remember one her freshman year in college when she was taking the lead amongst other kids on the team."

David Todd's instincts proved correct and a little over a year after graduating from Hanover College, Brooke Todd is now the new girls basketball coach at Switzerland County, the program she led to a regional championship game six years ago.

David Campbell

Brooke Todd (right) talks with Hanover College head coach John ones during a game late in the 2019-20 season. Todd has been named the new head girls basketball coach at Switzerland County High School, her alma mater.

Todd replaces Mark Boggs at the helm of the Pacers. Boggs, who went 50-45 in four seasons on the bench, was recently named principal at Switzerland County Middle School.

While Todd's father saw a future in coaching for his daughter, Brooke wasn't as sure. She had always entertained the idea, but it wasn't until recently that she decided to give it a serious look.

"I certainly didn't think that when I graduated from college last year that coaching would be my next step," Brooke said with a laugh. "I helped out with the team last year and got to be around them, but it wasn't until we had the sudden change with Mark's departure that I gave it a serious look. I decided just to go for it."

While Todd is still young, she is the same age that her high school coach, Ashley Kitts, was when she started coaching. Like Todd, Kitts was a former standout at Switzerland County who was one year removed from graduating from college when she was tapped to replace legendary coach Wayne Ellegood with the Pacers.

Kitts faced a rebuilding operation in her first season with only one starter — Eve Galbreath — back from the year before but a talented group of freshmen. One of those freshmen was Todd, who ended her career with a regional finals appearance on her resumé and the school's career scoring record, which has since been broken by Aleah Thomas.

Todd has remained close to Kitts, who resigned five years ago after she also transitioned to school administration, and plans on leaning on her as a resource.

"I played for Ashley for five years because she was my middle school coach the year before so I learned a lot from her," Todd said. "I have been fortunate to be around a lot of really good coaches, from Ashley to (John Jones) and (Chris) Hitchcock and everybody at Hanover College. I have

Reds' Santillan gets 1st win, hit to top Braves

BY JEFF WALLNER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Tony Santillan allowed one run in six innings to earn his first major league victory and Nick Castellanos hit a two-run homer, lifting the Cincinnati Reds to a 5-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves on Thursday night.

Santillan (1-1) gave up three hits, struck out eight and walked three in his third big league start. He also doubled in the third inning for his first career hit.

"Tony was very happy not only to get a win but he pitched very well," Reds manager David Bell said. "He got his first hit. It was a big night for him."

Major League Baseball's crackdown on the use of sticky substances continued Thursday, with umpires making random checks of pitchers.

Braves manager Brian Snitker deflected any notion of suspicion with left-hander Tyler Matzek, who threw 21 pitches and walked three in two-thirds of an inning in relief of starter Jesse Chavez (0-1).

Matzek averaged 2,575 rpm on his slider, 2,090 on his fastball, and 2,477 with his curve — all below his season averages of 2,997, 2,487, and 3,303. It was his second outing since the new rules were implemented.

"He just couldn't get ahold of the ball," Snitker said. "I don't know why."

The Braves, who score nearly half their runs via home runs, went ahead 1-0 on Freddie Freeman's 17th homer in the first. But that was the only run Atlanta could manage against Santillan.

"This, for me at least, it's the top of the top to get a win by my name," Santillan said. "I don't show a lot of emotion on the field. It was good vibes all the way around after I hit the double."

Brad Brach, the Reds' fourth pitcher of the night, got three outs for his first save of the season.

It was a bullpen day for the Braves, who summoned the 37-year-old Chavez (0-1) from Triple-A Gwinnett to make his 482nd major league appearance and first start since 2019. He allowed two runs in 2 1/3 innings to take the loss.

The Braves used six pitchers on the night.

"It wasn't easy piecing things together," Snitker said. "We did a good job navigating the whole thing and kept ourselves in the game."

The Reds were clinging to a 2-1 lead when Castellanos delivered the big blow, his two-run blast off Luke Jackson in the seventh. Castellanos drove in four runs.

"Those are the spots I have to better in," Castellanos said. "I needed to be better with runners on base."

Ozzie Albies hit a solo home run off Tejay Antone in the eighth.

NO RELIEF

The Reds' struggling bullpen took another hit on Thursday when right-hander Lucas Sims was placed on the 10-day injured list with a sprained right elbow. Sims is 4-1 with a 5.02 ERA and 44 strikeouts in 28 2/3 innings. He is expected to miss up to four weeks.

"There was one night in San Diego (last week) where he felt like he slept on his elbow wrong, then he bounced back," Bell said.

MAKING MOVES

To make room on the roster for Chavez, the Braves optioned right-handers Kyle Wright and Ty Tice to Triple-A Gwinnett and transferred left-hander Tucker Davidson and catcher Alex Jackson to the 60-day injured list. Right-hander Tanner Roark also was selected from Triple-A.

NCAA aims for hyperlocal solution to NIL as placeholder

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
AP COLLEGE SPORTS WRITER

The NCAA is lurching toward a temporary, patchwork solution in addressing name, image and likeness compensation for athletes, a hyperlocal approach to allow everyone to earn money off their fame starting July 1 without uniform national rules.

The latest strategy to provide clarity to a dramatic change in NCAA policy comes days after the Supreme Court handed down a ruling that left the association exposed to future legal attacks.

The NCAA Board of Governors met with the Division I Board of Directors on Thursday to discuss the next step for sorting out NIL. The Board of Governors, the NCAA's highest governing body, put forth no public recommendations following the meeting.

The Division I Council discussed possible next moves to NIL earlier this week and is scheduled to convene again Monday. A final decision could be made by the D-I Board of Directors next Wednesday — one day before NIL laws go into effect in at least seven states.

A solution being considered involves the NCAA waiving its rules banning athletes from being paid for use of their name, image and likeness while still keeping bylaws that make pay-for-play and recruiting inducements impermissible, a person involved in the process told The Associated Press. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because NCAA discussions about NIL were not yet finalized.

In Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, New Mexico and Texas, laws go into effect July 1 that make it impermissible for the NCAA and members schools to prevent athletes from being paid by third parties for things like sponsorship deals, online endorsements and personal appearances.

On Thursday, Kentucky became the seventh state with a law that has a July 1 effective date when Gov. Andy Beshear signed an executive order.

The NCAA had hoped for a national law from Congress that has not come and its own rulemaking has been bogged down for months. College sports leaders are instead moving toward the type of patchwork regulation they have been warning against for months.

Opendorse CEO Blake Lawrence, whose company is working with dozens of schools to create NIL programming and assistance for athletes, said it "seemed unfathomable" the NCAA would allow this to happen.

"But now that might be the best strategy," he said.

Following the template of a recommendation made by six Division I conferences to the D-I Council last week, schools would follow their state NIL laws. To that end, the University of Florida released its NIL guidelines that, among other things, bars school employees and boosters from compensating athletes for NIL use.

About a dozen other states have NIL laws that could take effect next month and states such as Ohio have legislation pending.

"In a strange twist of events, schools in states without laws could have an advantage because they can make any rules they want," Lawrence said.

Most state laws about to go into effect restrict schools from being involved in financial agreements athletes make with third parties, Lawrence said. Given the ability to make their own policies, some schools might decide to take a more active role.

The pivot to a hands-off approach to NIL by the NCAA could be part of a broader strategy following the Supreme Court ruling in the Alston case. The high court said the NCAA cannot limit benefits schools provide to major college football and basketball players as long as they are tied to education.

The decision also raises the possibility of future antitrust challenges to NCAA compensation rules. A lawsuit targeting proposed changes to the NCAA's NIL rules was filed earlier this month by one of the plaintiffs' attorneys in Alston, and a judge on Thursday denied the NCAA's motion to dismiss the claim.

The NCAA could shift to conferences taking the lead on setting standards for athlete benefits as a potential way to avoid lawsuits.

TRAINERS ROOM

Braves: OF Ronald Acuna Jr. was out of the lineup for the second straight day with a stiff back. "He's still sore," Snitker said. "They worked on him today. Hopefully he'll be back in there tomorrow. It's a day-to-day thing." Acuna was scratched from his start Wednesday.

Reds: RHP Sonny Gray was scratched from his rehab start Thursday at Triple-A Louisville after he woke up with a sore back Wednesday morning. Gray, on the 10-day injured list since June 9 with a right groin injury, had his start pushed back to Saturday.

UP NEXT

Right-hander Vladimir Gutierrez (3-1, 3.86 ERA) makes his sixth major-league appearance after becoming the 19th pitcher in Reds franchise history with at least three wins in his first four starts since Tom Shearn in 2007. The Braves will counter with left-hander Drew Smyly (0-1, 4.70 ERA) who'll be making his 13th start.

taken a little from each of them. Each has taught me a lot about the game."

Unlike Kitts, Todd will not face a rebuilding operation in her first year. The Pacers won 18 games last season before falling in the sectional championship and return three starters from that squad led by twin sisters Jessie and Maddie Duvall.

Todd said she doesn't plan on doing too much differently than what Boggs did with the group, but there are always tweaks that can be made.

"I'm super excited to be with this group. We have a great group of seniors who are experienced and ready to go but at the same time, we have a nice young group of sophomores that are very talented," Todd said.

"There are always things that can be done and little things we'll do differently here and there, but I was around Mark all last year and I know the way that he did things and it won't be that much different."

Todd noted she does feel pressure to win right away considering how experienced the team is, but she also doesn't want to limit herself to just a sectional title.

"We want to win the sectional but we also don't want it to be the end goal of the season. Why not win a game in the regional or later in the state tournament?" Todd said. "Our thing is that we are going to work hard and be the hardest-working team on the floor and if we do that, the other stuff will come. We'll concentrate on the first five games, and then the next five and so on and worry about the postseason later. By the time we get there, we'll be ready."

Todd is not the only athletic hire made by Switzerland County High School recently. Brian Graham, a former head boys basketball coach at Rising Sun, was employed as athletic director to replace Boggs. Graham officially starts work next week. Also, David Todd has been hired as the new head boys soccer coach.

Cubs no-hit Dodgers, tie MLB season record

BY GREG BEACHAM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — After Craig Kimbrel struck out pinch-hitter Will Smith to end the game, the Chicago Cubs' closer was curious why catcher Willson Contreras celebrated with a bigger-than-usual fist pump.

Fellow reliever Ryan Tepera then ran onto the field at Dodger Stadium and whispered in Kimbrel's ear: "You have no idea what happened."

The Cubs' fearsome bullpen had just teamed up with starter Zach Davies for the first combined no-hitter in franchise history — and none of the three relievers who followed Davies onto the mound had any idea they were pitching their way into history until after they finished.

The four Cubs combined for the seventh no-hitter in the majors this year, matching the most in a season since 1900, as Chicago blanked the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-0 Thursday night. The Dodgers drew eight walks, getting at least one from each opposing pitcher, but managed no other baserunners.

The tension was palpable in the Cubs' dugout, where Davies watched with trepidation after reluctantly agreeing with manager David Ross' decision to pull him for a pinch-hitter after 94 pitches. Davies (5-4) issued five walks while scrapping through six spotless innings against the defending World Series champions.

"I think every pitcher wants to continue in the game, regardless of his pitch count, but it worked," Davies said. "Chafe, Tep and Craig shut the door. A part of history. I'm excited for the guys that were on the field. I can't complain at all."

But incredibly, the relievers remained blissfully oblivious to the stakes as Tepera, Andrew Chafin and Kimbrel went to the mound and preserved a zero they couldn't see, thanks to the position of the Dodger Stadium bullpen.

"The whole bullpen had no idea," said Chafin, who pitched the eighth. "It was completely oblivious. But in our defense, in that bullpen, from our perspective on the field, all we can see is batting averages and the count, stuff like that. We can't see the scoreboard with the hits."

Tepera and Chafin each walked a batter during their inning on the mound, but Los Angeles couldn't capitalize.

Kimbrel then walked Chris Taylor leading off the ninth, but the ferocious closer struck out Cody Bellinger, Albert Pujols and Smith to finish the Cubs' 17th no-hitter since 1880.

"I think they all needed to get a walk in, just to make my heart rate go up a little bit," Ross said. "You get to the ninth, I don't know I've been as nervous in a long time with a 4-0 lead and Craig Kimbrel on the mound as I was tonight."

Javier Báez homered in the first inning and Contreras added a two-run shot in the sixth for the Cubs, who happily celebrated the franchise's first no-hitter since last Sept. 13, when Alec Mills blanked Milwaukee.

Contreras was the constant in the combined no-no, and all four pitchers praised his work behind the plate.

"From catching this team since 2016, I've been catching a lot of shutout games, but nothing close to a no-hitter," said Contreras, who was visibly emotional afterward. "Tonight was one of those nights that are super special in my life, one that will be hard to forget.

"I didn't realize that we had a no-hitter going on until the sixth, and from the seventh on, my heart would just race and race. I was trying to slow the game down, to put the right finger down, to call the right pitch."

The seventh no-hitter of this highly unusual season — the most in baseball history before July 1 — was the first since May 19. The Boston Red Sox also took a bid for a combined no-hitter into the eighth inning earlier Thursday, but lost the no-no and the game at Tampa Bay.

"This is an awesome moment," Davies said. "The World Series, I think something like that probably tops it. But even though it wasn't solo and it was a combined effort, being a part of history is something special."

With this no-hitter — the 312th in baseball history — 2021 matches 1990, 1991, 2012 and 2015 for the most in a single MLB season since 1900. That's one shy of the record eight in 1884, the first season overhand pitching was allowed.

The other no-hitters this year were thrown by San Diego's Joe Musgrove (April 9), Carlos Rodón of the Chicago White Sox (April 14), Baltimore's John Means (May 5), Cincinnati's Wade Miley (May 7), Detroit's Spencer Turnbull (May 18) and the New York Yankees' Corey Kluber (May 19).

In addition, Arizona's Madison Bumgarner pitched a seven-inning hitless game in a doubleheader on April 25 that is not recognized as a no-hitter by Major League Baseball.

The Cubs actually did something that's been much harder than throwing a no-hitter over the past two seasons: They beat Walker Buehler, who hadn't lost in 23 straight regular-season starts.

Buehler (7-1) took his first loss since Sept. 21, 2019, for the Dodgers despite throwing six innings of five-hit ball. Buehler made it through six innings for the 17th straight start, but lost his streak of 30 straight games overall without a defeat.

"Two really bad pitches to two really good hitters, and they took advantage of them," Buehler said. "Just can't leave fastballs in the middle like that."

Williams withdraws from NBA draft, will return to Purdue

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST LAFAYETTE — Purdue said Thursday that center Trevion Williams has decided to withdraw from the NBA draft and will return to campus for his senior season this fall.

Williams was a first-team all-Big Ten selection last season and one of five finalists for the Kareem Abdul-Jabbar Award, which goes to the nation's top college centeer, when he averaged 15.5 points, 9.1 rebounds and 2.3 assists while recording 11 double-doubles.

"I would like to thank the organizations that gave me the time to work out for them and to go through this process with them the last couple of weeks," Williams said.

"The feedback and instruction that I received will be very beneficial as I continue to improve as a basketball player. I am excited to return to Purdue for my senior season, to earn my degree and help this program in any way possible."

The 6-foot-10 Chicago native was a first-team all-Big Ten selection last season and his six 20-point games ranked No. 3 nationally among major-college players.

Williams' return means Purdue will have all five starters back from a team that went 18-10 and earned a No. 4 seed in the NCAA Tournament.

"Trevion has put in a lot of time on getting his body right and working on his game," coach Matt Painter said.

"He will obviously have a big role for us next season."
